Allison Imre, President and Owner

What do you get when you cross advertising savvy and marketing genius with fun personalities, a love for creativity and a third-place Junior Olympic speedskating trophy? While the picture above may have given the answer away, local companies and nonprofits know the longstanding, undeniable reputation of Grapevine Communications as a business-boosting partner is anything but a punchline.

Now entering its fourth year under president/owner Allison Imre, Grapevine is also celebrating 18 years on the Suncoast serving local and national clients alike. The team encompasses creative writers, designers, web developers, digital strategists, account executives, and public relations and social media specialists who are proven experts in their fields and genuinely enjoy the creative process.

Grapevine takes the success of their clients seriously... themselves not so much. This heavily focused yet light-hearted approach to their profession makes team Grapevine a joy to work with, all while the tangible results they achieve speak for themselves. Together, Grapevine dreams big and produces even bigger. Each day, the staff gathers to bring fresh, bold and inspired ideas to life, using a strategic blend of traditional and digital media solutions designed to develop memorable brand experiences, drive growth, optimize performance and attract attention. They take pride in thinking differently to breathe life into stories and brand images that truly resonate—and they make sure to have fun along the way.

Simply, the smart-thinking, cupcake-eating, hardworking, speedskating people at Grapevine love what they do, and they want to do it for you. No big deal.
